This week we want to know:

If I could live anywhere in the world, I would live in ...

Germany. Compared to other Western countries, things are much cheaper there. Also, there are a lot of public holidays in Germany.

Singapore, because it is always hot there. Also, the city's housing policy is much better than that in Hong Kong. For example, around 80 per cent of Singaporeans live in government-built flats which are much bigger than the ones in Hong Kong. Those flats are also very affordable. If I lived there, I wouldn't have to worry about a place to live.

The Louvre Museum, in Paris, France, would be my "Wonderland". A former palace for French kings, the famous monument now houses hundreds of artworks, sculptures and other valuable collections.

It would be awesome to live in a huge art gallery. Every morning, I would see so many things that I really like and I would feel relaxed. It would be different from living in a city where people are very busy and have no time for each other.

Lorena Tam, 15, Pope Paul VI College

Hawaii. Ever since I watched Lilo and Stitch, I have found Polynesian culture fascinating. Their folk tales are very mysterious. I want to experience their traditional fire dance and see the beautiful flowers on the islands. I also want to see the diverse wildlife.

Zoe Leung Fung, 12, HKMA David Li Kwok Po College

Japan. It is a very safe country. Very few murders or robberies take place there. In addition, the people are extremely polite and respect others. They always say "sorry" or "excuse me" when they do something that might be annoying to other people. The Japanese also enjoy a high quality of life because their products are very safe.

Chan Cheuk-ying, 16, Tak Nga Secondary School

Under the sea. I would be able to see the marine ecosystems that exist there, including coral reefs, as well as magnificent creatures such as whales, sharks and turtles.

Judy Cheung On-yiu, 15, Fung Kai Liu Man Shek Tong Secondary School

Thailand, because things are very cheap, there are lots of yummy spicy food, and the people are very friendly!

America. I am a big fan of the NBA, so living in the US would give me the chance to see NBA games. Also, I would be able to see my favourite basketball players in person. Then there are the burgers - they are so huge that it's worth living in the US.

Alamdin Osman, 14, Immaculate Heart of Mary College

Hong Kong. The city is a food paradise, with dishes from many countries around the world. Among Hong Kong's many attractions is its wonderful scenery - for example, you can go to Victoria Peak or take a ferry to the outlying islands.
